Bernard Stolar joins Convergent Mobile's Advisory Board.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16 /PRNewswire/ -- The mobile infrastructure and applications developer announced that Bernard Stolar, veteran of the interactive entertainment industry, has joined Convergent's Board of Advisors. Bernie will assist management in strategic direction and entry into new industry verticals. "We are extremely pleased that Bernie has accepted our offer to assist the company as we continue our growth and seek out new channels for our platform. Bernie is very well-connected and extremely experienced in many of the areas we are after and we look forward to his contributions," said Mark Porter, Convergent's CEO.

"Convergent has made great strides, and it is now at an exciting point where great growth is possible," said Bernard Stolar. "I'm looking forward to working with the team and the rest of the Advisory Board, to help Convergent move quickly to the next level."

About Bernard Stolar - Bernie joined Google in February, 2007 where he is responsible for building in-game advertising. Previously, he spent 2 years at Mattel Interactive, overseeing all of Mattel's software, online and computer-enhanced toys, including all product and business development, marketing, sales and operations. During his time at Mattel, Bernie refocused the company to deliver best-of-breed educational and entertainment products until that division was sold in late 2000. He joined Mattel in January 2000 after serving as president and chief operating officer of Sega of America and Sega Entertainment, where he was responsible for Sega's console and PC gaming businesses in North America. Before joining Sega, Bernie was at Sony Computer Entertainment of America when it launched the Sony PlayStation. He was responsible for planning and developing strategic direction for the company's third-party software development efforts that played a key role in the global success of the PlayStation console. His experience in the video game business spans more than 20 years, including serving as president of the Lynx Division for Atari Corporation and founding Pacific Novelty Manufacturing, which at that time was the largest video arcade manufacturer west of Chicago.
